

Public Banking Videos

Public Banks, An Introduction — Ruth Caplan

Ruth Caplan, co-chair of the DC Partnership Bank Working Group and Marc Anderson, executive director of the Public Banking Institute offering their insights about the benefits of Public Banks. From the NOW DC Social Forum, April 2012.

6:25 minutes

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tR\_XMu5sCPA

Ellen Brown | Money, Credit and Sustainability

Published on Oct 5, 2014

We Are People Here! and The Public Bank Institute Present Banking on New Mexico, A Public Bank Symposium. Saturday, September 27, 2014

34:35 minutes

http://www.publicbankinginstitute.org/ellen\_brown\_money\_credit\_and\_sustainability

PBIs Taking Control of your money video

This is a great introduction to public banking. America has plenty of money--but it's all under the control of private banks. This video uses economic reality, clips from "It's a Wonderful Life," and other methods to bring home the key points that banks create the money they lend, and that the privatization of finance has been a disaster. It explains public banking's potential to lower the costs of funding public goods--because, after all, it's our money.

8:05 minutes

http://www.publicbankinginstitute.org/taking\_control\_of\_our\_money

The Real Tea Party Begins Here

Based on Ellen Brown's Web of Debt, with additional materials provided by the Public Banking Forum, this video--narrated by Bob Bows--begins with the Boston Tea Party, an uprising that really began because of the British government's efforts to prevent the American colonists from issuing their own money. The video examines Alexander Hamilton's efforts to create the Bank of the United States, and Thomas Jefferson's alarm at the private control of finance. It ends with a well-informed and passionate call for public banking as a way to re-assert state and local independence.

9:41 minutes

http://www.publicbankinginstitute.org/the\_real\_tea\_party\_begins\_here